This journal of the European Hematology Association publishes results of highly relevant basic, translational and clinical research in hematology.

The journal is dedicated to support hematology patient care, research and education worldwide.

The HemaTopics section presents insightful discussions on all aspects related to hematology, including summaries of important articles, reports of new therapies, discussions on EU policy, and other hematology news items. Review articles and guideline articles provide clear overviews of new developments and recommendations for patient care. An innovative and fast peer-review process is used to select the manuscripts of the highest quality.
