Current Opinion in Internal Medicine Extended Archive

Instant access to issues beginning with Volume 1, Issue 1 to 2008 issues of Current Opinion in Internal Medicine, which provides a powerful, broad-based perspective on the major advances from throughout the world literature.

Current Opinion in Internal Medicine brings together articles of vital importance to internists and primary care physicians from Current Opinion journals in 16 subspecialties—cardiology, lipidology, organ transplantation, gastroenterology, clinical nutrition and metabolic care, nephrology and hypertension, rheumatology, allergy and clinical immunology, oncology, hematology, infectious diseases, pulmonary medicine, critical care, endocrinology and diabetes, neurology, and psychiatry.

This journal is not available as a current subscription.

Publisher Lippincott Williams & Wilkins (LWW)
Product Type Journal
Language

Revert to natural language from Ovid as the trusted solution that transforms research into results.